ORGANISATION

The meeting is organized by Prof. Günter Schneider (UMG) and Prof. Michael Heuser (MHH) of the CCC-N Translational Research Team. Together, the University Medical Center Göttingen (UMG) and the Hannover Medical School (MHH) form the Comprehensive Cancer Center Lower Saxony (CCC-N). It is one of 15 "Krebsspitzenzentren" funded by the German Cancer Aid with the aim to provide patients with improved care according to the latest scientific findings and to advance innovative cancer research. ## WELCOME

With the success of our kick-off symposium in the previous year, we are excited to present the second Young CCC-N meeting!

The meeting is held as a platform for inspiring young cancer researchers to present their work, exchange ideas, models, technologies, and establish scientific networks beyond their institutions. In addition, experienced researchers share insights into their careers and provide valuable tips.

THE PROGRAM INCLUDES:

- Poster presentations by all participants
- Young Scientist talks: Open for application to all participants. Slots will be awarded by jury selection of young scientists.
- Insights on career paths with talks by Prof. Nico Lachmann (Institute of Experimental Hematology, MHH) and Dr. PD Ramona Schulz-Heddergott (Dept of Molecular Oncology, UMG)
- The platform for social exchange between other young cancer researchers (with snacks and drinks)

You will have the chance to present your work, learn about other cancer research topics and relevant methods used in the framework of the CCC-N, and interact scientifically and socially with other young scientists.

The meeting will be the second meeting for the Young Cancer Scientist Network "Young CCC-N" for researchers at the UMG and the MHH. This network will promote interaction by offering networking opportunities, workshops, and information about funding opportunities.

If you are a cancer researcher who

- is currently working on your MD/PhD thesis or
- has finished their thesis within the last three years and is engaged in postdoctoral cancer research

You are invited to submit an abstract at afzk.short.gy/ycccn2023

Submission guidelines can be found on site.

Applications deadline is October 10, 2023.
